Date: May 1995

Biographical/ historical note:

See preface and introduction for original conception of the collection. It has since been expanded to include all known landscape commissions for which the Society has drawings.

Scope and content note:

The collection consists primarily of landscape drawings, elevations and sketches of gardens in the Fairfield area designed by landscape architects. The drawings are supplemented by photographs, biographical information, articles about the architects, and research correspondence of the compiler, Dona E. Caldwell. The collection is arranged in three parts: landscape architects, nursery firms, and other historic gardens. Landscape architects are arranged alphabetically. Biographical and collection information, including locations of other collections, are organized in Series A for each architect or nursery.

Commissions are generally arranged chronologically, with the exception of Susan Weeks' work, in which they are organized alphabetically, first by private residence and then by commercial job. Nursery firms and other important gardens for which no architect is known, are also arranged alphabetically. Oversized drawings are stored separately in flat file drawers and in box 4. See container list for exact locations.

PREFACE

The measure of change in the form and fabric of life in the town of Fairfield, and the nearby villages of Southport and Greens Farms, Connecticut, may be observed through the documentation of notable gardens during the past 100 years, 1883-1983. The landscape architecture collection at the Fairfield Historical Society provides physical evidence of residential gardens, their locations, their owners, and the date of design and execution, through plans, photographs, or correspondence concerning most of the notable gardens in the area.

The designers of these residential gardens, whether landscape engineers, nurserymen, gardeners, or landscape architects, became members of the American Society of Landscape Architects, founded in 1899. The early designers worked in firms located in New York or Boston as the art of landscape gardening known to Thomas Jefferson grew into a flourishing profession at the beginning of the 20th century. Many clients were the owners of profitable financial undertakings in the city. They created the demand for country retreats along Long Island Sound, where outdoor pleasures, refreshment and relaxation could be enjoyed away from the bustle, noise and stress of the city. Reaching these rural estates, with their shade trees, shimmering water and green verdure, became a practical reality as railroad lines and the automobile facilitated travel time to the bucolic farms which were purchased in this region as summer estates. The local agricultural scenery was replaced with suburban expansion between World War I and II. Greater urban development spread throughout the area with the increase in population. As the beginning of a new century approached, garden designs on a proportionately smaller scale continued to fill the need for the enjoyment of aesthetic beauty.

GUIDE TO THE MASTER LIST OF GARDEN DESIGN PROJECTS 1883-1983

The following list contains all of the known landscape design projects, numbering 134, cataloged in this landscape archive, beginning in 1883 when Frederick Sturges requested the Olmsted firm "to visit a newly purchased site" on Round Hill Road, Town of Fairfield. This early correspondence did not progress beyond the point of a preliminary inquiry. Subsequently, this property was purchased by Walter B. Lashar who commissioned Arthur A. Shurcliff to design the grounds for his estate, "Round Hill." The stone residence and handsome gardens were purchased in 1942 by the Jesuit Order and the "newly purchased site" of 1883 became known as Bellarmine Hall on the campus of Fairfield University.

The projects which were commissioned to three Fairfield resident landscape architects are abundant in proportion to projects given to those 15 other members of the American Society of Landscape Architects; among these three, Alice Orme Smith and Agnes Selkirk Clark were to be honored as Fellows of the profession.

INFORMATION PROVIDED IN THE LIST

The list has eight columns of information:

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
Owner	Address	Town	Landscape Architect	Date	Plans	Photos	Correspondence

1. Name or owner of project. So far as possible this list gives names of individuals only for projects involving the design of grounds with the exception of the Greenfield Hill Schoolhouse and the Thaddeus Burr homestead.
2. Location by address. If street numbers have been redesignated, the former are indicated in parentheses, such as 47 (1) Sturges Highway.
3. Location by town of Fairfield, Greens Farms, or Southport.
4. Identification of landscape architect. Includes biographical sketch and some photographic portraits.
5. Time span of work on project taken from the date of plans prepared for the owner.
6. Y/N indicates yes or no for one or more plans executed for the owner by the landscape architect or firm. Drawings are described by specific title, sheet measurements, and medium, that is ink or pencil on vellum or tissue, blueline or blackline print, or photocopy of plan.
7. Y/N indicates whether or not there is pictorial documentation of the projects using photographs, slides, photocopies; or glass slides for Maitlands, now part of Fairfield University and formerly the estate of Oliver Gould Jennings.
8. Y/N indicates whether or not there is additional information about the project, the owners, or the landscape architects through correspondence, published articles, oral documentation, memorabilia (published catalog, awarded medals), or letters of verification for archival documentation.

This master list is a cross-index to the project information in the Fairfield Historical Society's Landscape Architecture Archives. Folders are arranged alphabetically by landscape architect. Biographical and collection information is followed by commissions arranged either alphabetically by owner of the property, or chronologically by date of the drawings. Oversize drawings are stored in flat files or in an oversize flat document box.
